Exporting Excellence

June is Caribbean American Heritage Month, a month to recognize the many invaluable contributions Caribbean immigrants have made to America. For many, the most famous Caribbean immigrant to come to America was Founding Father Alexander Hamilton, who was born on the small island of Nevis and eventually moved to St. Croix before venturing to King’s College in New York City to embark on a storied political career. Perhaps just as impressive is newly elected Vice President Kamala Harris, who is both the first female vice president and the daughter of a Jamaican father. Similarly, former U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell’s parents were both from Jamaica. Jamaica’s influence extends well beyond the political—the tiny island nation has exported influential artists, scientists, businesspeople, and activists.

Perhaps no name is more synonymous with Jamaica than Bob Marley. During the 1970s, Marley single-handedly popularized reggae music around the world. Through his music, Marley also delivered messages about Jamaica’s struggles with poverty and inequality, struggles that he himself contended with during his life. His hardships began at birth when his white British father Capt. Norval Marley, a colonial superintendent of the island, abandoned his young Jamaican wife, leaving her to raise Bob on her own. Marley turned his difficult life story into a universal story of hope and strength for all Jamaicans, transforming hardship into beauty and song.

Often, world-famous Jamaicans like Bob Marley overshadow others making significant contributions to science and society. For example, Dr. Neil Hanchard is a leading expert in the field of childhood genetic disease. Hanchard’s research will improve life for children all around the world. Then there’s chess grandmaster Maurice Ashley, Surgeon General of California Nadine Harris, author Malcolm Gladwell, basketball star Patrick Ewing, and so many other Jamaicans. It seems that every part of American society and the farthest reaches of the globe have been touched by Jamaica’s influence.

Resident Council June 8th and 22nd 2pm MDR

Welcome to June!

There are a lot of catch phrases that I've heard in the past that seem to fit our past year. One was that after the storm there's a rainbow and another was to look for the silver lining. Just last week someone told me that there's a light at the end of the tunnel. These are all true even though it seems like it has taken forever.
I want to personally thank all who have faithfully (and correctly) worn their masks and have kept socially distant. It's been hard on all of us at Woodside, but you helped to keep us all safe.
I am very grateful.
As more people get vaccinated, we will eventually see the light and the silver lining and dance under the rainbow.
I look forward to that time!

God Bless
Bev Chalabian
